

Sees Fight For Freedom

Political control of Michigan's correction system has bred unrest among inmates at the Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson according to Garret Heyns, warden at Ionia reformatory and a former corrections commissioner. Heyns testified to this effect before legislative finance committee at Lansing. Riot damage at the prison exceeding $4,000,000. His allegation was another "hot potato" tossed into the lap of Governor G. Mennen Williams who, like former Governor Kim Sigler, has advocated more appointive power for the governor to run state government. As quoted in the press, Heyns said: "When the director is appointed by the governor and is a political appointee, the nervousness of subordinates cannot be eliminated. It even filters down to the inmates."

Heyns' solution is a return to the five-man corrections commission law whereby prisons were taken out of control of the governor and were run by persons chosen for the jobs on the basis of their training and experience in correction work. An obvious target is Earnest C. Brooks of Holland, Williams' appointee as corrections director. Brooks, a Democrat, is in the insurance business. The so-called "model" corrections commission law, interestingly enough was a product of a Democratic governor—Frank Murphy in 1937. It continued on the statute books 10 years until Governor Sigler convinced the legislature that the governor should be responsible. Sigler took great pride in his appointment of a career man, Joseph Sanford, former deputy at Atlanta's federal prison.

When the voters' protest tide against Sigler swept unknown Williams into the governor's chair Sanford was promptly replaced by Williams' own appointee, Mr. Brooks. Brooks is a successful business man and former member of the State Senate. Sanford died in 1951. The situation thus has come on contradictory aspects. Heyns criticizes political control of prisons through a Democratic governor's appointment of a one-man commission. His solution is a return to a model law inaugurated by a Democratic governor. If a Republican legislature agrees with his recommendation, it will be admitting its error in accepting a Republican governor's solution: One-man control. And so it goes. Who's right? Who's wrong? In the game of politics, the answer depends largely on which side of the party fence you happen to be, so roll your own!

Kiwanis Club Notes

Misses Phyllis Goss and Caroline Long, Grayling High School students and members of the Grayling High Conservation Club gave a tree planting demonstration as the program at Monday night's meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Grayling.

They demonstrated the slit and hole method of planting along with a running commentary on each step and why it was necessary. To complete the demonstration the girls had an illustrated card system which graphically showed each step in the planting of a pine seedling.

They gave a brief history of the Conservation Club and of the school forest which is located just east of the Fish Hatchery. Many pulpwood logs and some lumber was selectively cut from the forest this past year, they said. They were accompanied to the meeting by Wesley Kumpula, club director. The talk was most informative and very much enjoyed by club members.

Grayling Fire Department News

The weekly meeting of June 2 was called to order by Chief Middle. The department went on an inspection tour out around Lake Michigan. We looked over the roads running down to the lake shore and found two of them were so badly washed out it would be impossible to drive a fire truck down them. These roads will have to be fixed up, as it is necessary in case of a fire out there to drive the small truck right down to the lake shore, so we can pump water to the fire. While we were out there we went through the Wayside Inn and found it to be clean and neat, with not much of a chance for a fire to start.

We then returned to the fire hall and read the minutes of the last meeting. The meeting was adjourned at 9:00 P. M. Sixteen members were present.

Chest X-ray Very Speedy

Inasmuch as the chest X-ray unit now touring northern Michigan is capable of taking 100 to 125 chest X-rays an hour, adults need not worry about spending much time for a turn before the X-ray camera, according to sponsors for the survey.

In fact, the district health department reports that in the first days of X-raying at Cadillac, the longest line up of X-ray patrons reported was served in about 15 minutes.

Offered to help build TB protection for everyone, a free chest X-ray "requires no disrobing, and is quick and reliable," said Dr. C. E. Merritt, district health department director.

Timetable for the chest X-ray unit in Grayling and Roscommon is: Monday, June 9 Grayling, Rotating Works, 12:30-5:30 and 7:00-9:00 p. m.; Tuesday June 10, Grayling, Rotating Works, 9:30-12:30 a. m. and 1:30-5:30 p. m.; Wednesday June 11, Roscommon, High School, 3:30-5:30 and 7:00-9:00 p. m.; Thursday June 12, Roscommon, High School, 9:30-12:30 a. m.

Emphasizing that "TB plays no favorites," health officials nevertheless again urged "mothers, fathers, grandmothers and grandfathers," to make a special effort to get a chest X-ray. TB among older people remains a grave problem, according to health department and TB association records.

Every adult has been urged to visit the X-ray bus when it is in this area.

"Through your cooperation, you can help build health protection for everyone," said Dr. Merritt. "Please plan to have your chest X-rayed."

Truths Vs Untruths...

Various deceptive stratagems are periodically used to delude the public as to the true size of the profits earned by industry — and what happens to them.

For instance, it is commonly claimed by labor leaders and others that business can grant major wage increases without raising the prices of its products, by taking them out of allegedly huge profits. Yet last year, according to Economic Intelligence, dividend payments were $9,500,000,000 while compensation to employees totaled $178,100,000,000—nearly 20 times as much. If every nickel of dividend payments had gone to employees, leaving the owners exactly nothing, wages could have been increased by an average of only 5 per cent.

Another malicious and basically dishonest technique is to cite the magnitude of industrial profits before taxes. Nothing could give a more false picture of actual conditions. At current rates, taxes take some 60 per cent of all corporation profits. And if taxes aren't a basic and inescapable part of the cost of operating a business, nothing is. The money a company pays to the government cannot be used to build plants, pay wages or dividends, or anything else. It is gone forever.

Furthermore the money left to the corporation after all bills are paid is not, as so many think, divided up among the shareholders. Since the last world war, more than 50 per cent of corporate profits after taxes has been spent on plant expansion, to create more production and to provide more jobs for workers.

These are facts—as against the untruths and half-truths disseminated by the enemies of free enterprise. The public should know them.

"Our government should fulfill its basic responsibility for establishing sound monetary policies which will deflate excessive demand and thus take the pressure off prices."—C. E. Wilson.

Picture of a Pair who just wake up

HERE in the driveway is a Buick. It has just arrived. It belongs to this proud young couple. They've just "arrived" too.

They've arrived at a discovery—the discovery that owning a Buick instead of a "low-priced car" isn't so much a matter of money.

It's a matter of knowing the facts of life. Buick prices are closer to the prices of smaller, less powerful, less distinguished cars than most people think.

Why don't you check into this?

You'll find you could pay $300 to $400 more — and still not match the horsepower of this nimble beauty.

You could pay hundreds of dollars more—and still not get any more interior room, or richer fabrics.

But that's only part of the story.

The big thing about any car is the way it goes. So you ought to find out how this car rides the road—the freedom from bobble and sway that cost a million real dollars to develop.

You ought to sample the way Dynaflow Drive* feeds the power — with a steady swoop and unbroken smoothness in city traffic, on hills, or out on the open road.

And you ought to know how it feels to touch off that Fireball 8 Engine. With all its might, this high-compression valve-in-head gets a lot of miles from a gallon of gas.

We'll tell you this—because a lot of folks have told us this: No matter what car you're driving now—no matter what cars you've looked at—they'll never seem the same after you try this one.

Just give us a chance to prove it — and you'll have a lot of fun.

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice. *Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series.

EISENHOWER'S POLITICAL CREED

Integrity in Federal Government, Two-Party System Needed First

By Kevin McCann
President, The Defiance College

GENERAL of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, former supreme commander for the allied powers in Europe, has publicly and privately pointed out that his assignment as boss of NATO "was a project in which the United States has invested billions and in which success is mandatory to our nation's security."

As a consequence, he could not, until recently, participate in current political argument. But for more than a year in his NATO command, and for two and a half years as president of Columbia University, for a long stretch and chief of staff in Washington and

In current discussions of the possible nomination of General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower as the Republican candidate for the Presidency in 1952, the comment is often made: "What does he stand for?"

His opinions on a variety of topics, national and international; his theories of government, his philosophy of life, his hopes for peace, his achievements as the administrator of the Allied victory in Europe and as the overseer of a great educational institution, Columbia University, have become known through his reports, speeches and letters.

In 12 articles, beginning today, this newspaper presents a sampling of Gen. Eisenhower's beliefs as a public service to the American electorate. The articles are based on the book, "The Man from Abilene," by Kevin McCann, who served Eisenhower when the general was chief of staff, followed him to Columbia and later to SHAPE headquarters in Paris.

And from his knowledge of America and its people, he set forth recently in a letter to a friend from his headquarters near Paris this estimate of our aspirations in the great political year of 1952:

"As of now, I feel safe in saying that the great concern of the American people is:

- (1) renewed assurance that we really have a two-party system;
- (2) honesty and integrity in government;
- (3) acknowledgment that the resources of even such a country as ours have limits;
- (4) that reckless and excessive spending and taxation can, in the long run, be as dangerous to our way of life as are external threats;
- (5) hope of establishing an administration in Washington that can provide a unifying influence, possibly even inspiration;
- (6) a hope of getting an administration characterized throughout by a sense of justice, fair play, and consideration for all our citizens rather than sickness in appealing to special interests and pressure groups; and
- (7) confidence that our affairs in the outside world will be handled intelligently and firmly so as to regain for us a position of security and respect, and to do this in such a way as to avoid extravagance."

In another letter, written in late January to a friend, Gen. Eisenhower framed this capsule version of his own political creed:

"The real issue of today's political life is human freedom against bureaucracy and regimentation; it is a healthy two-party system against an overwhelming single party; it is clean efficiency and complete honesty in all echelons of government as opposed to bureaucratic bungling; it is justice and fairness for all as opposed to special favors for pressure groups; it is sensible co-operation in a world in which our own balance in spiritual, economic, and military strength must be preserved as opposed to stupid isolation or to attempt to buy safety."

Pointing out that he had expressed himself clearly many times on such matters, he added:

"If what my friends now need from me is a description of how I'd apply these purposes to taxes, to budgets and deficits, to Formosa and Yugoslavia, to farm parity, and so on, and so on—I should say that they are not taking very seriously my convictions as to the importance to America of my current duties and responsibilities. Moreover, circumstances change particular applications—they do not change principles, basic character, values, and purposes."

Gen. Eisenhower has very positive views on taxation and the problems it creates in modern America. He has considered the tax burden in connection with his widely-known stand on preserving individual and state rights against federal encroachments.

"Extravagance in government spending," he wrote recently to a friend of long standing, "brings about ever-increasing taxes—taxes which, if long continued, will strangle incentive, the very quality which built the nation. Meanwhile, the government debt rises. The value of our money becomes the football of politics—subjected to the political whim of the moment. Inflation has partly destroyed our savings and our life insurance values."

"The government penetrates more and more into our daily living; its answer to excessive control is more control. In this whole process, the abuse of the taxing power, has been one of the chief weapons the government has used."

"It is a favorite weapon for three reasons. The first of these is that it is the readiest at hand. The second is that unjust and unwise taxation, tending toward the destruction of freedom, can be made to appear, temporarily, as humanitarian concern for the masses."

"Slogans like 'Soak the Rich' are sweet to the ears of millions, and the protests of the few who discern the catastrophic effects upon the worker and the freedom of the masses are scornfully dismissed as the screams of the wicked, enduring deserved punishment."

"The third reason is that few people are conscious of the connection between a prosperous, free enterprise and freedom—national solvency and individual freedom. Worthless money and bankruptcy lead to nationalization of property; a development that compels bureaucratic control, which must finally give way to autocratic control."

"So, our problem is to preserve the opportunities of all citizens to make certain that our synthesis of social, economic and political organization and procedure is designed to bring happiness and prosperity to the millions, and, while doing this, to prevent unwarranted governmental encroachment into our private affairs—to examine the need for each of the alleged necessary controls over private business and living."

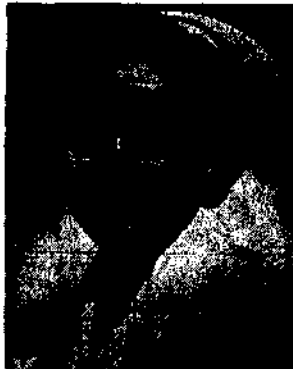

In public speeches in the United States, Gen. Eisenhower summed up his opinion on taxes:

"How far can a government go in taxing away property rights and still not leave the government the master of the people. Instead of its servant? We have, I think, repudiated a theory that, fundamentally, there was a struggle in this country between human rights and property rights. We repudiated it when we realized that property rights are only one of the human rights."

On the related issue, of federal economy, he has stated:

"If solvency and security are not synonymous, they are so closely related that the difference, if any, is scarcely discernible."

Bits O' Talk

Michael Steger, foster son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bear had an exciting experience recently. Mike is a jet pilot stationed near Munich, Germany. While he and three others in their planes were climbing to 30,000 feet following a take-off, he heard a small explosion in the engine of his ship followed by a loud grinding sound. He throttled the engine and it ran smoothly again so he didn't think too much about it. However he radioed one of his companions to fly back with him. Shortly there was another explosion like the first which he handled in the same way. This was followed by a loud explosion. His companion radioed him to bale out as fire was coming out the end of his ship twice the length of the ship. Mike said he didn't need the second invitation, so out he baled. His chute opened as it should, he was able to release his chair but looking up he saw that the chute was torn. He had baled out at 25,000 feet while going 400 m p h and was certain the chute would collapse. He found out later that this was impossible but if Mike gets grey hair he knows why. The descent took 10 minutes and he was fortunate in landing in a plowed field so only missed one day of flying.

Cancer Fund Workers Congratulated

Editor's note: Following is a letter received by Mrs. John MacAuley from the American Cancer Society concerning the recent fund drive.

May 2, 1952

Mrs. John MacAuley
406 Park Avenue
Grayling, Michigan
Dear Mrs. MacAuley:

I want to extend the heartiest congratulations, both for myself and for the entire State organization for the very fine campaign report which has been made by your County Unit.

Those of us who are working so close to this picture and realize so well what all of the implications are, realize how important it is for the public to support this work and also to know of the scope of the program of the national American Cancer Society.

Our local campaigns provide the means by which we achieve both of these goals.

We all know too, of the hard work and detailed planning which must go into a successful campaign and the team work that is necessary to carry it through.

Your fine report has indicated that you and your co-workers have convinced the people of your community of the worth of the County, State and National Program.

I know that you must feel a great satisfaction in making your quota and knowing that because of your work and that of you volunteers hundreds of thousands of people throughout the country will benefit from research, education and service you have helped to make possible.

Again, our congratulations and very best wishes.

Sincerely,
Carl H. Dreger,

Michigan Mirror

ment in state government, once the legislature accedes to public pressure and appropriates money to hire manpower.

It is quite another thing, however, to get the equivalent of results through coordination of existing governmental agencies.

An illustration at point is Michigan's civil defense program, a new postwar activity of state government. Last year this department spent $1,973,000, one million dollars of which went for blood typing. For this year's budget the governor asked $3,000,000, a good 50 per cent more. The legislature, trying to cope with a rising state deficit, granted only $271,575.

Gen. Lester J. Mallard, civil defense director, has practically shelved ambitious plans to continue blood typing for an atomic disaster, expand the ground observer plan, buy fire trucks and medical supply trucks and set up special programs for key areas as the Soo locks.

By dire necessity he is now resorting to an appeal to existing state agencies for coordination. The health and highway departments, for example are asked to help carry some of the load through their own manpower and funds.

Another illustration is the state department for economic development. Here is a super-chamber of commerce, fathered by former Governor Sigler, to help build business and industry in Michigan.

Government again intervened to supplant private leadership and private action, and all at the taxpayers' expense. The test of a new state agency, as we see it, is this: Is it needed? Can we afford it? Are we getting our money's worth?

A tax brevity: The state constitution says, in effect, that the legislature shall balance the budget. But Gov. Williams vetoed $18,000,000 of the Republican $28,500,000 program, creating a deficit of some $20,000,000 to be tacked on to the $65,000,000 accumulated deficit.

Who is now responsible for the unbalanced budget — Governor Williams or the Legislature?

Sen. Frank Andrews (R-Hillman) says, "My position is to vote no on any attempt to balance the budget. We are our legislative duty and the governor vetoed it. He won't get a chance to veto the beer tax, for it's not coming up."

Sen. Lee H. Roy (R-Hancock) said, "We won't solve any of our problems until we bungle Williams. He's just a jinx."

J. McNeill, legislative committee says quietly, "They've authorized expenditures of more than $330,000,000. That's law and you know it as well as I. Their only answer is to find more money—somewhere."

Governor Williams' solution is simple and familiar. Distribute the wealth by taxing employers' profits. FDR applied this principle of European socialism nearly 20 years ago. He called it the "New Deal."

A by-product of increased taxes and government spending, both impelled in part by the cost of World War II and the present cold war against communism, is inflation. Socialism and inflation go hand in hand.

The average hourly rate of Detroit production workers last March was $2.04. A 40-hour work-week meant earnings of $81.60 — as an AVERAGE! That is inflation.

If further priming of the inflation pump is effected in 1952 under political direction, the illusion of good times will be even greater.

Governor Williams' greatest trump card is his championship of the under-dog, the "common man," whose welfare he would improve at every opportunity, primarily at the expense of the profits of "big business" and under the illusion of prosperity.

It is a political mirage hard to overcome.

And the Republican legislative leaders know it.

If Michigan has more deficits, who's to blame? The governor who vetoed "consumer tax" bills, or the legislature which "refuses" to tax employers' profits? The showdown is just about at that level. Take your choice.
